On 7 November 2011, the European Agency for Development in Special Needs Education hosted the "Young Views on Inclusive Education" Hearing at the European Parliament in Brussels. This event provided young people from across Europe, both with and without disabilities and/or special educational needs, the opportunity to make their voices heard. 88 young people from 31 delegations expressed their views on inclusive education based on their own experiences. They also highlighted key benefits and challenges, identified their requirements and shared their hopes for the future.

This Poster Collection contains all 31 posters produced by the delegations. The young delegates’ names, their respective educational centres and a short description of each poster can also be found in this book.

Introduction

On 7 November 2011, the European Agency for Development in Special Needs Education hosted the “Young Views on Inclusive Education” Hearing at the European Parliament in Brussels. This event provided young people from across Europe, both with and without disabilities and/or special educational needs, the opportunity to make their voices heard. 88 young people from 31 delegations expressed their views on inclusive education based on their own experiences. They also highlighted key benefits and challenges, identified their requirements and shared their hopes for the future.

A fundamental aspect of the hearing was the exhibition of posters that had been designed and created by all the young delegates in co-operation with their schoolmates.

The Agency invited young delegates to get creative and design a poster that expressed their views on Inclusive Education, which would then be exhibited at the European Parliament throughout the Hearing. The young delegates could use whatever materials they liked, such as drawings, pictures, text, Braille and tactile materials, to express what inclusive education means to them and what inclusion is like in their school or institution.

A few questions were sent to the delegates in advance in order to assist them in coming up with ideas for their posters:

- What is inclusion?
- What does inclusion mean for your school/institution?
- What makes inclusion successful in your school/institution?
- Why do you think inclusion is important? Can you identify some of its benefits?

This Poster Collection contains all 31 posters produced by the delegations. The young delegates’ names, their respective educational institutions and a short description of each poster can also be found in this book.

On behalf of all the representatives of the Agency, we wish to express our gratitude to the young delegates for their important contributions. We will work to ensure that your voices are not forgotten.

These delegates come from the following schools:

Schulzentrum Ungargasse, Wien
Bundes-Blindenerziehungsinstitut, Wien

In this poster we can see photos of young people both with and without special educational needs, who are participating in a diverse range of activities in and outside of the classroom. Some are doing sports such as skiing, sailing and football whilst others are dancing, playing chess, horseback riding and working at computers. The main messages, written in red at the top and bottom of the poster, state that “we are part of it” and “we live it”. The schools’ logos and descriptions can be found at the centre of the poster, next to a graphic in the colours of the Austrian flag.

Belgium Flemish

This poster was designed by the young delegates from the Belgium Flemish speaking community:

Mathias
Mei Lang

These delegates are first year university students.

The poster title is written in Flemish and means “Towards an autism-friendly school”. Four different coloured pieces of a jigsaw are lying a little away from each other, but we can see that they should fit together. Each piece contains a different message. The first gives recommendations on communicating with autistic students, such as giving them enough time to understand a message. The second concerns the attitudes of classmates, who should be available to help and give feedback. The third explains what is required for an autistic pupil in the workplace: for example the workplace should be well organised. The last piece of the jigsaw explains how assignments for autistic students should be structured.

These delegates come from the following schools:

Centre Scolaire EPSIS, Cerexhe-Heuseux
Ecole de coiffure, Liège

This poster takes the form of a collage. In one photo we see a very happy little girl in a wheelchair. Another image depicts an adult, a girl and a boy in a wheelchair going to school together. The caption beneath it reads “One school for all” in French. A drawing also depicts two people, one yellow and the other orange, moving to hug each other. Several coloured speech bubbles surround this drawing, containing words and phrases in both English and French. They refer to various elements that make up a diverse society: “equality of opportunity”, “boy”, “girl”, “black”, “white”. The poster also includes text in Braille and images showing the sign language alphabet.

These delegates come from the following schools:

Geri Gymnasium, Nicosia
Gymnasium of Akropolis, Nicosia
Makarios 3rd Technical School, Nicosia

This poster includes several pictures and drawings. The main title, “Our inclusion” is written in both Greek and English, as is the name of the country “Cyprus” at the bottom of the poster. The pictures show various young people participating in activities. Several are performing a dance in traditional Cypriot dress; others are playing football and participating in a cooking class. There are also a number of group pictures and drawings of objects such as flowers and a heart.

This poster was designed by the young delegates from the Czech Republic:

Lucie
Tomáš

These delegates come from the following schools:

Jedlička Institute, Praha
Secondary Medical School, Opava

This poster depicts Lucie and Tomáš’ lives at school. A map of the Czech Republic shows us whereabouts they live: Prague and Ostrava respectively. Alongside a photo of each of them, they tell us their ages, hometowns, hobbies and their favourite subjects at school. Other pictures show them participating in school activities. We see Lucie performing and singing a Czech song with her classmates. Tomáš’ pictures show him running and accompanied by his football team and classmates. Tomáš also explains why it is good for him to be in an inclusive school and why he is glad to be in this school, as well as sharing his wishes for the future.

Tomáš Černý
- I'm 17 years old
- I come from Hlučín near Ostrava
- I'm studying the second year Health lyceum at Secondary Health School in Opava
- My favourite subjects are Maths and Chemistry

Why is inclusive education good for me?
- I have options as other children
- At school I often understand what teachers say
- The teachers are willing, they like to help me when I develop activity
- I have an individual plan, it helps me:
  1) In English lesson I have a text and I am able to combine reading with listening
  2) Teachers speak with their face turned to the class, they often write on the board
  3) When I need, teachers send me materials by email

What I wish:
I think that all schools should provide education to children with hearing handicap.
All students have a right to get a quality education and to be in the class with other hearing schoolmates who should understand us and our needs.
We should have a choice.

In my school I have excellent conditions for learning, teachers are perfect.
I'm glad that I can be student of this school.

This is my favourite activity - jogging.

The title of this poster is “Inclusion: Yes” and has been made using drawings and brightly coloured cards. In the centre, there is a green circle with the text “Inclusion” on a red background. Four arrows point from this circle in different directions. At the tip of each of the arrows are the words: “Knowledge”, “Participation”, “It’s important with technical support” and “Mutual responsibility”. Alongside the words, the delegates have made drawings depicting each of these values: for example “Mutual responsibility” is two hands reaching towards each other with a heart in the middle at the tips of their fingers.

This poster is made up of drawings. On the top left, we read the names of the Estonian delegation. On the right, there is a drawing of a person in a wheelchair saying “I am not an idiot!” alongside keywords such as “motivation”, “communication”, “understanding” and “supporting”. In the centre of the poster there is a drawing of a handshake surrounded by the words “You always have support”. We also see various drawings such as hands communicating in sign language, eyes, ears and people in wheelchairs. One speech bubble says “Equal opportunities for all” and another drawing depicts a boy and girl holding hands. It reminds us that “We are all humans”.

Finland

This poster was designed by the young delegates from Finland:

Jere
Tuomas

These delegates come from the following school:

Ruskeasuo School, Helsinki

In the top half of this poster we are given the school name and shown a picture of four young people, including one in a wheelchair and one using a walking aid. Elsewhere on the poster we see young people participating in various activities. The images are linked through chains made up of small, differently coloured circles. The text above the images links a message to the activity we see carried out in the picture. We read: “Sowing the seeds for the future...” (young people working in a garden), “to hit your targets” (a young person doing archery), “it requires hard work and practice...” (young people studying) “... to be a full member of society” (young people in the Finnish Parliament), “purposeful life includes active free time” (young people making music), “starting step by step...” (a visually-impaired pupil with a white stick being guided up a flight of stairs) “... to dare to challenge even the highest mountain” (wheelchairs on a beach in front of a hill).
Inclusion for our pupils means full participation in life.

1. Sowing the seeds for the future...
2. To hit your target...
3. It requires hard work and practice...
4. To be a full member of the society (pupils visiting Finnish Parliament).
5. Purposeful life includes active free time.
6. Starting step by step...
7. ...to dare to challenge even the highest mountain

These delegates come from the following schools:

IEM Saint Jean de Dieu, Paris
Collège les Champs Philippe, La Garenne Colombes
Lycée Les Pierres Vives, Carrière sur Seine

The title tells us that this poster is about inclusive education in France and indicates the name of the school. Four pictures of students in various classroom situations are set against a strong red background. In the centre of the picture we are shown an image of the school building. Four speech bubbles are arranged around the image which contain statements from four students: Honoré, Harry, Lilian and Monique. Honoré explains that he goes to a mainstream school, but that he sometimes has special classes and likes this system. Harry gives a definition of inclusion as including individual help allowing him to follow the classes. Lilian also appreciates going to a mainstream school with some special classes because it allows her to learn like everybody else. Finally, Monique points out that inclusion means going to a mainstream school but also having the assistance necessary to follow the same courses as non-disabled students.

Nous

suivons les cours avec les autres enfants mais nous retournons dans la classe Ulis pour faire nos contrôles ou quand un professeur est absent. Ce système me plaît. Je suis bien intégré dans la classe. Les autres enfants sont très attentionnés (un peu trop parfois). C’est aussi bien pratique d’avoir les réeducations au collège.

Honoré, 3e

L’inclusion c’est être aidé dans les cours par l’AVS et la prof d’Ulis. Il y a des adaptations dans notre vie quotidienne pour suivre le programme du collège. Les profs nous donne des photocopies des cours quand on ne peut pas écrire.

Harry, 4e

C’est bien d’avoir une école normale mais avec une Clis ou une Ulis. S’il n’y avait pas l’Ulis, je ne pourrais pas suivre au collège. Ça donne la possibilité aux élèves du primaire et du collège de continuer leurs études comme tous les autres.

Lilian, 6e

L’inclusion c’est être au collège dans une classe normale mais avoir des aides (les soins de rééducatrices, les cours, les aides aux évaluations l’Ulis, les AVS…) pour pouvoir suivre les mêmes cours que les autres élèves, non handicapés.

Elsewhere on the poster are drawings of matchstick men, some of whom are in wheelchairs. Many of them are holding hands and they are all of different shapes and sizes, to reflect real-life diversity. Several German words have been written all over the poster. They describe various emotions such as “anger”, and values such as “respect”, “courage”, “laughter”, “fun”, “tolerance”, “enough time and space for learning”, “equality of opportunity”, “integration” and “helping each other”.

The title of this poster indicates that it was made by the “Hellenic delegation”. It depicts a classroom scene using strong colours such as light and dark blue, green, yellow and red. The scene is a teacher writing Greek words on the board and looking back to a pupil who is sitting in a wheelchair and holding a book in his hands. The pupil seems to be telling the teacher what to write on the board and both seem content to be working with each other. At the bottom of the poster we can read the names of the delegates who created the poster.

The Hungarian poster is made out of wood rather than paper. We read the title “Inside a unity” in the middle of a large white wooden board. Five rows of four white wooden squares are fixed on the board above and below the title, which make the whole poster tactile. In the second, third and fourth rows, three of the white squares have been replaced by yellow, red and green squares, tilted at an angle. Below this arrangement we also find text written in Braille.

The title of this poster is "Inclusion in Iceland 2011". The poster has a blue background and there is an outline of the country of Iceland in its centre. Part of this outline is covered up by a very detailed drawing of the globe. We can see Europe and parts of Africa, Asia and North America. Above the globe is the text "We are all special in the universe". On the left, right and in front of the globe, we can see black cut-out figures of three people - two boys and a girl, which represent the young delegates. Underneath these figures we learn more about each delegate, including what school they go to and what kind of disability they have.

This poster has been created by hand using coloured pencils. The title is “Inclusive education”, which we read at the centre of the poster, as if seen through the magnifying glass that is drawn around it. The word “Inclusion” is written in bold letters. The flags of the United Kingdom, Germany, France and Ireland have been drawn around the magnifying glass. We can also read various key concepts written by hand on the poster, such as: “acceptance”, “ability”, “work and effort”, “human rights: belonging”, “support”, “inclusion”, “disability” and “equality”.

The title of this poster tells us the name of the school and the fact that it is a vocational educational institute. Below the title we see pictures of young people in their school, each with a caption relating to the activity shown. "Would you like a cup of coffee..." (a pupil carrying a tray with drinks) "...or something to drink?" (a group of delegates wearing their uniform behind a bar). "The class we like" (classmates sitting on the floor). "We feel good together" (a class picture). "Winners" (another class picture). "Working side by side" (several delegates and a teacher working together). "We can also ride..." (group picture with a horse) "... and act" (a group of delegates wearing costumes). "We like our uniforms" (a group of delegates wearing their uniforms). "Together in the kitchen" (a group photo of three delegates in chef whites). We also see small drawings of different drinks and food all over the poster.

The main image in this colourful poster is a swimming pool. The title states that “Inclusive education is like a pool!!!” and “Everybody is part of it”. We see several people, both children and adults, interacting with the pool in different ways. One boy is preparing to jump from a diving board and is shouting “Getting in!” A group of two adults and two children are sitting on the edge of the pool and saying “We are happy for the opportunity to use it partly”. A girl is standing on the edge and says “I am still thinking...” Another girl is getting out of the pool and says “I’m finally ready to integrate into the modern society”. Another boy is already in the pool and tells us “I’m in it and I like it!” Below the picture we see a shelf of books in a range of colours.

This poster was designed as a collage. One image shows people working together as one says, in German, “I participate and that is good” and another shows people standing around the globe holding hands. In the third picture we see a group of people participating in a demonstration, holding signs declaring “liberty”, “human dignity”, “equality” and “inclusion”. In the middle of the poster we read the names of the young delegates on two strips of paper arranged in the shape of the roof of a school. Below this are several cut-out figures and images of a school building and classroom situations involving people with disabilities. Further pictures depict someone communicating in sign language and another person using a keyboard device. We also see an image of a person helping a blind person to cross the road. The caption reads, in German, “mobility without barriers”.

This poster is designed as a piece of abstract art. We see many different coloured lines against a white background and get the impression that paint has been thrown or randomly painted onto a blank canvas. The result is that the lines of paint interweave against the white background and become visually interesting when put together. The poster uses warm colours such as red, pink, orange and yellow, as well as a little green and blue. The accompanying text tells us the name of the delegates’ school as well as the name and date of the Hearing.

This poster is designed in the style of a cartoon. In the middle of the poster is a single image where we can see a student walking from the classroom board back to his seat. The teacher points to the board where we can read “Everyone included. Learn from each other!” Three speech bubbles in orange, purple and pink are arranged around the scene, each containing a single word and its explanation. “Creativity”, we are told, is the most important aspect of inclusion because only creative solutions can move the world forward. The second bubble is entitled “Diversity” and reminds us that there are different ways to reach a particular goal, that everybody has different needs and that everybody deserves the attention he or she needs. The last bubble, “Information”, states that teachers need to be informed as to how to deal with inclusion and furthermore, they have to be able to deal with the adjustments made for the delegates.
Learn from each other!

Everyone included
Learn from each other!

Creativity
The most important aspect of inclusion is creativity! Only creative solutions move the world forward and inclusion is no different. We shouldn’t be afraid to try new things. Fear for people who are different won’t solve anything!

Diversity
Inclusion shows that there’s not just one way to reach a certain goal. Everyone has different needs and every person deserves the attention that he or she needs. If that happens, everyone will benefit.

Information
It’s important that the teachers are given information about how to deal with inclusion. They have to be able to deal with the adjustments that have been made for the pupils.

This poster was designed as a collage of individual and group photos of young people both with and without disabilities participating in various school activities. We also see several cartoons depicting a student in class and a student on crutches. In the centre is the image of Briskeby school’s leaflet. In text boxes we are given information about inclusion in practice in Norway, including an organisation for young people with hearing impairments and an organisation for young people with rheumatism. Further text tells us what inclusion means for the young delegates, such as involving other people and letting everybody participate, regardless of their abilities. Two final text boxes tell us how integration works in practice in the schools, focusing on openness, small class-sizes and the right of everybody to get the help he or she needs.
HLF is the national organization for youth with hearing impairment. I am a local member of Briskeby HLF. We arrange theatre trips, pizza nights, annual trips etc. We work closely with the adult organization, as they run our school.

Inclusion is when we involve other people.

In my school there is a lot of openness, and people are aware of my disability.

Inclusion is to let everybody participate, independent of their abilities.

Briskeby has worked with reaching deaf students on spoken language for hearing inspired youth to get the same opportunity as other youth to learn the subject, based on their abilities. The students are in classes of maximum 15 and have flexibility. The students have what is going on a better opportunity than usual to pick up what is going on in class. The school takes care of all individual needs at that is a demanding job we have in running.

BØRGE is the association for children and youth with rheumatism. I am very happy that I am a member, as you get to meet others who are in the same situation and get to know that you are not alone.

BØRGE has created a brochure that tells you all you need to know about rheumatism. I have placed them in the classroom, so that everyone can find their answers there.

Everyone has something to contribute with, regardless of how they are created. It is therefore important that we make it possible for everyone to participate based on their own assumptions.

In my school everyone is hearing impaired, and this means that everyone is automatically included.

In my school we have an elevator, but no special facilitation for people with disabilities.

This poster is designed as a collage. In the top left of the poster we see the Portuguese flag and the logos of the two schools and the European Hearing. Beneath this is an assortment of pictures of pupils both with and without disabilities participating in a range of school activities inside and outside of the classroom. Down the right hand side of the poster are three individual pictures and one group picture of the delegates smiling into the camera. In speech bubbles we read, in both Portuguese and English, their ideas about inclusion, such as their right to be integrated, the fact that they are normal, intelligent people who are able to learn like others and that inclusion can transform life and mentalities.

The top half of the poster is a photo taken in a classroom situation. In the background we see two pupils working together. Sitting in front of them, one boy is showing his plaster cast to his classmate. In the foreground are three pupils sitting at a Braille printer. A boy and a blind girl are helping another girl to read the Braille text. In the middle of the poster we read the title of the poster: “Inclusive education”, which is accompanied by the tagline “One more pupil in the classroom”, written in yellow against a green background.

Sweden

This poster was designed by the young delegates from Sweden:

Elin
Klara

These delegates come from the following school:

Risbergska School, Örebrö

The title of this poster is “Sweden, Risbergska School”. On the top and bottom left of the poster we can see two collages of pictures showing lots of students doing a diverse range of school activities. Some key words overlap with the images, describing values such as “participation”, “democracy” and “love”, and activities, such as “role-play”, “school council” or “activity day”. Elsewhere on the poster we are given detailed descriptions from the young delegates of how they define inclusion, how inclusion is put into practice at their school and how they think inclusion can still be improved on a practical level in their school.

The Risbergska School

What is inclusion?
We have been asking students from our school what inclusive education means to them. These photos are based on the answers we got.

What do we think can get better?
Even though we find our school relatively including, there’s still a long way to go to the completely including vision we have. To make improvements would be an investment for the future.

A change for the pupils with reading disabilities would be needed. More textbooks should be possible to listen to as audio files.

We would like to see a better collaboration between the three school councils, the one with hearing students and the ones with hearing impaired and deaf students. Then these students could act as examples for the whole school and that would result in a closer relationship between all the students.

We also wish for more joint lessons with students with and without hearing impairments. That would create a sense of belongingness for the entire school. No matter if you have a disability or not, you have got the same right to join the fellowship at Risbergiska upper secondary school.

Risbergska is an upper secondary school (16-19 year olds) with approximately 1130 students and 180 staff members.
It’s located by the river Svartån in Örebro. Örebro is situated in the very heart of Sweden and the town is the sixth largest in Sweden.
Risbergska upper secondary school offers a lot of different education programs with different profiles to choose from. The school also offers special classes for students with hearing impairments.

Inclusion at our school
Our school uses different kinds of aids to make it easier for students who have some kind of disability. These pictures show the most common aids at our school.
Switzerland

This poster was designed by the young delegates from Switzerland:

Melania

These delegates come from the following schools:

UBS AG, Zürich
Campus Muristalden, Bern

This poster was painted using watercolours. The title is written in brown against a deep blue background: "With our hands the tree can still grow". Portrait photos of the three young delegates have been placed within the text of the title. In the main body of the poster we see a tree, formed at the base by lots of detailed paintings of arms and hands in different shades of skin colour. All these hands are reaching up and together they create a huge tree. The branches of the tree are made up of arms, with green leaves growing around them.
With our hands, the life can still grow.
UK England

This poster was designed by the young delegates from UK England:

Charlotte
Sam
and their classmate Megan

These delegates come from the following schools:

Queen Elizabeth School, Kirkby Lonsdale, Cumbria

This poster is composed of four parts. In the top left we can see a photo of the three girls standing in a garden in their school uniform and smiling into the camera. On the top right is the red and white logo of their school. On the bottom left is a red, white and blue image designed in the style of graffiti, reading “Inclusion, some radical ideas”. Spokes were drawn into the letter O in “some” to look like the wheel of a wheelchair. On the bottom right, we see another picture of the three girls, this time working at a computer. Finally, between the logo and the last picture, we read the words “Include”, “New generation”, “Co-operation”, “Learning”, “Understanding”, “Diversity” and “Equality”. They make up an acronym because, read vertically, we see the word “Include”.

UK Northern Ireland

This poster was designed by the young delegates from UK Northern Ireland:

Daniel
James
John

These delegates come from the following schools:

Metropolitan College, Belfast
Methodist College, Belfast

In the top part of the poster, we see pictures of colourful books arranged so that they appear to be stacked in piles. Along their spines we read the names of various school subjects, such as English, Economics and Biology. The shape of the stack of books resembles the roof of a house. Below the roof we see other elements of the house, including six groups of four symbols arranged to look like windows. They symbolise physical impairments, visual impairments, hearing impairments and non-disabled people. Across the rest of this poster, the word “inclusion” is written in many different languages, as well as other key words such as “no difference”, “valued” and “together”.

UK Scotland

This poster was designed by the young delegates from UK Scotland:

Gemma Keenan
Katrina

These delegates come from the following organisations and schools:

Scottish Youth Parliament, Edinburgh
Borders College, Galashiels

This poster is deliberately left blank. The Scottish delegation wishes to show that for many children and delegates living with sight loss, posters and other learning materials are not accessible. For many of them, the printed word cannot be recognised and visual displays, like this, appear completely clear. This, it can be argued, is in itself not inclusive. They believe that this is the strongest message they can give.

These delegates come from the following schools:

Pen y Cwm Special School, Blaenau Gwent
PRP Vocational Training, Pembroke Dock
Pembrokeshire College, Haverfordwest

The title of this poster is "Inclusion", written at the top of the poster in coloured bubble writing. Beneath the title, there is an image of children and adults, both walking and in a wheelchair. They are all holding hands. In the centre of the poster we can see a blue minibus with a smiling sun wearing sunglasses painted on the side. A photo of a girl in school uniform is placed so that she seems to be sitting in the bus. Surrounding the main picture are drawings of several roads showing the girl’s various destinations, such as activity clubs, school, work and college. Below the picture, we can see the school’s logo and a map of Wales.
Inclusion
On 7 November 2011, the European Agency for Development in Special Needs Education hosted the "Young Views on Inclusive Education" Hearing at the European Parliament in Brussels. This event provided young people from across Europe, both with and without disabilities and/or special educational needs, the opportunity to make their voices heard. 88 young people from 31 delegations expressed their views on inclusive education based on their own experiences. They also highlighted key benefits and challenges, identified their requirements and shared their hopes for the future.

This Poster Collection contains all 31 posters produced by the delegations. The young delegates' names, their respective educational centres and a short description of each poster can also be found in this book.
